News

Summer is once again upon us, we have just launched a new site <http://www.lmp2.com/> (LMP squared)!! This has come about after a lot of our larger corporate and government clients asking for more choreographed multimedia shows with lasers and pyro, anyway take a look and let me know what you think especially at the stratosphere it truly is a great thing.

We just finished The Guardian CIPD Awards at Old Billingsgate Market in London We utilised our new 25 x 6 Meter projection screen, which was awesome. Jimmy Carr hosted the evening; it was a great show despite being a very hot day the guests had a great time.

We also for the first time split the room between the awards and the dancing which was a new departure and I was a bit worried about it, but Mark Goodier is a great DJ and kept everyone dancing until late.

Regards

Martin Speight

The Stratosphere

The Stratosphere is a unique giant translucent globe. It has been designed to be a 360° degree projection sphere, it is also capable of holding 200 guests.

This unique 360° projection surface works extremely well as a giant video screen as the surface of the sphere is specially designed for this medium;

We have projected both on the inside and on the outside of the Stratosphere with equally impressive results. Multi-images can be projected simultaneously - so the possibilities are endless.

The Projected videos are visible both inside and outside the Stratosphere. The interior of the Stratosphere offers the world's most exclusive venue with 2000 square feet of unobstructed viewing. It is a 60ft tall by 50ft wide inflatable dome with two airlock systems for entrance and exits.

The Sphere is extremely practical for Road shows, as it takes about 6 hours to erect, which means that we can arrive at a venue and be completely set for an evening spectacular, before the day commences the next day.

Where ever in the world we have used the stratosphere as a venue or as part of a road show, it always attracts attention and creates an enormous impact.
